Digital Humanities Speaker Series

What the *$%@ is Digital Humanities?
Where did it come from, and where is it going?
Thursday, January 17, 2013, 7:00pm

The Department of the Humanities and Social Sciences is pleased to invite the community to its inaugural Digital Humanities Speaker Series, which will feature some of the premier scholars and practitioners in the interdiscipliary, project-oriented field of digital culture and its impact on education, research, design, and industry. Please join us for these exciting, eye- and mind-opening presentations. All are welcome!

John Unsworth

Vice Provost for Library & Technology Services, Chief Information Officer at Brandeis University

John was previously Dean and Professor of the Graduate School of Library and Information Science at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. He has served on the faculty of the University of Virginia and of North Carolina State University. John has published extensively on the subject of scholarship in the digital age, and he recently chaired the American Council of Learned Society's (ALCS) Commission on Cyberinfrastructure for the Humanities and Social Sciences.

John holds a B.A. magna cum laude from Amherst College and a Ph.D. in English from the University of Virginia. In 2005, he was a Vodaphone Fellow of Kings College, University College London, and was awarded the Richard W. Lyman award.
